POST IS HEADING FOR NEW YORK AT SIX-MILE ALTITUDE

Hopes to Make Coast-to-Coast Flight in From 7 to 8 Hours

DROPS LANDING GEAR

Will Attempt to Land on Skid Attached to Fuselage of Craft

UNION AIR TERMINAL, BURLINGHAM, Cal., Feb. 22—Wiley Post, attempting a stratosphere flight to New York in between 7 and 8 hours, hopped off from Union Air Terminal at 9:07 a. m. e. s. t., today, in his plane, the "Winnie Mae." Before leaving the field, Post said he would head directly for New York from an altitude of 30,000 and 35,000 feet. Just a few seconds after the trim white monoplane had soared down the runway here and had risen into the clear morning skies, the landing gear was dropped to the ground.

When Post reaches Floyd Bennett Field he will attempt to land on a skid which has been attached to the underpart of the fuselage of his plane.

Post said, just before he stepped into the plane, clad in his special stratosphere suit and helmet, he would follow the so-called great circle route to New York. This would take him over Pueblo, Cal., approximately 100 miles south of Chicago, and then over Allentown, Pa.

The Lockheed-Vega plane, powered with the same 450-horse-power motor which has twice flown around the world, lifted from the field with its load of 385 gallons of gasoline, after a very short run.

Philadelphians Guilty of Assault and Battery Charge

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 22—Residents of Philadelphia who come into Bucks County with the idea they can do as they please were heavily scored in a session of court here yesterday, when two residents of South Philadelphia were found guilty before Judge Calvin S. Boyer on charges of assault and battery.

The two convicted are Rocco DeGregorio and his nephew, Daniel Bocchino. The two were arrested as the result of a charge of assault and battery upon John Burkhardt, of Warrington Township, during the recent hunting season. It was charged that the two assaulted Burkhardt, with the result that his nose was broken, when Burkhardt ordered them off of his posted land in Warminter Township where they were said to be hunting.

In sentencing the two, Judge Boyer stated that Philadelphians would not permit residents of Bucks County to go to that city and play in their backyards. "You can't run wild over Bucks County." In his address to the jury, Robert G. Hendricks, counsel for the Commonwealth, informed that he is disgusted with "South Philadelphia scum" which plays havoc in this county.

Bocchino was sentenced to from three months to one year in the county prison, and ordered to pay three-fourths of the costs of the case, or $109.12; while DeGregorio was given a suspended sentence, ordered to pay one-fourth of the costs, $36.38, and placed on probation for one year.

HELD FOR DRUNKEN DRIVING

MORRISVILLE, Feb. 22—Albert VanHous, 5 Tyler street, Trenton, N. J., was arraigned before Justice of Peace Neal Nolan this morning charged with operating a motor vehicle while under influence of intoxicating liquor. VanHous had been examined by Dr. Theodore Cohen, last evening, following an accident here, in which his truck was said to have side-swiped a parked truck of the United Carriers of New York. Both cars were considerably damaged, but no one was injured. VanHous was held under $500 bail, and placed in the local police station. If bail is not secured he will be taken to the county jail at Doylestown today.

FINE HIT-RUN DRIVER $50 AND COSTS OF CASE

John M. Kelly, Philadelphia, Found Guilty by The Jury

HEARD BY JUDGE BOYER

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 22—John M. Kelly, 30 years old, of Philadelphia, arrested early in January as a hit-and-run driver, was found guilty yesterday before a jury in the Bucks County Court. Judge Calvin S. Boyer imposed a fine of $50 and costs and released the defendant under a suspended sentence.

Witnesses called by the Commonwealth at the opening of the case included Milton Poust, Anna Poust, Alfred Clee, Samuel Davis and Charles R. Armand.

Kelly, in defense, testified that he lives at 543 West Lehigh avenue, Philadelphia. He stated that he was riding with a girl friend on the Brownsville road, between Langhorne and the Street road, when his car collided with a car driven by Milton Poust, Langhorne. He said he looked back and the Poust car did not stop so he, too, continued.

The last case for trial this week will be the Commonwealth vs. Rocco DeGregorio, 1815 South 23rd street, Philadelphia, and Daniel Bocchino, 1418 North Broad street, Philadelphia, charged with assault and battery on John Burkhardt, Warrington, on November 21, 1934, in Warwick township.

Burkhardt, at the hearing, testified that he ordered the two defendants off his property during gunning season, but they refused to go and assaulted him in retaliation. It is alleged by the Commonwealth that Bocchino hit Burkhardt with his fists, breaking his nose and knocking him to the ground. Burkhardt will state that both defendants had loaded guns at the time and that there were four dozen trespassing signs on his place along the road.

Charged with assault and battery, Maynard Barron, constable of Springtown township, and Wilbert H. Fry, deputy game protector, went on trial before President Judge Hiram H. Keller Wednesday afternoon.

The trial was the result of an affair, when the defendants, it is alleged, attempted to seize a dog upon a warrant issued by a Justice of the Peace, who charged Minnie Nichols, near Stoney Point, with harboring a dog.

Mrs. Nichols testified that the defendants assaulted her in her home when they came for the dog. She also charged them with bribery.

Barron, in his own behalf, testified he went to the Nichols home to get the dog and return him to Justice of the Peace Stever.

He admitted shooting at the dog.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY GIVES STATE EDUCATORS OPPORTUNITY TO FURTHER AIMS IN CHARACTER DEVELOPMENT OF SCHOOL STUDENTS, SAYS DR. RULE

Children in Intermediate Grades Are Quick to Respond to Imaginative Appeal of Dramatic Character — Students Emulate the Fine Character of Washington

By John W. Seotzin
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Feb. 22—(INS)—Pennsylvania educators stressing character development as the foundation of the school curriculum were advised today by Dr. James N. Rule, superintendent of public instruction, of the "tremendous" possibilities to further their aims in the observance of Washington's birthday.

Dramatization in all periods of child development and varying with their degree of maturity plays an important part in impressing upon children the desirable qualities of character, Dr. Rule believes. Children in the intermediate grades, he said, are quick to respond to the imaginative appeal of a dramatic character.

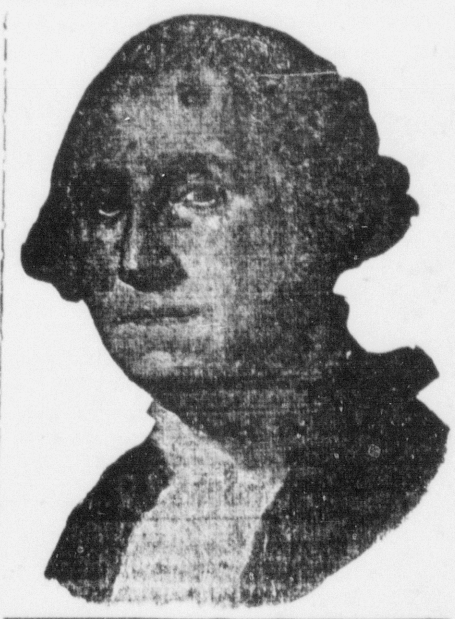

"Activities in the school, centered around the study of a man of great nobility of character, whose record of service to the State, of devotion to human welfare, of personal sacrifice to the common good, is unsurpassed in the annals of our nation, provide living exemplification of a personality worthy of emulation," he declared.

Illustrating his point, Dr. Rule said the teachers' stories in the early grades usually focus the attention of children upon desirable traits possessed by Washington, such as industry, loyalty, honesty, and truthfulness, adding:

"Questions may be raised for discussion with the children which will indicate how the character and attitude of Washington made him great. Young boys and girls are quite able to build up authentic conceptions of steadfastness, courage, and service."

"In the modern school, socialized procedures are being more and more emphasized. No character in our history possessed in greater measure those qualities of character—self-direction, self-reliance, and self-control which we are attempting to encourage through our informal program of pupil participation in classroom activities."

"No content is more saturated with worthwhile material for the discussion and debate of boys and girls than is the service of Washington to his fellow countrymen."

The dramatization of episodes from the life of Washington must not necessarily take the form of a difficult and finished product in the school, according to Dr. Rule, but may be used to advantage in developing the extemporaneous expression growing out of the discussion in social studies period. He explained:

"Such dramatizations from the life of Washington are productive of real and lasting values. No child can become sufficiently acquainted with the precise and effective expression of our great national hero without increased respect for the beauty of the mother tongue."

"No child can attempt to express by his characterization the dignity, grace, and composure of Washington without having a definite influence left upon his own character. No child can study and attempt to interpret the attitude of Washington to his associates without having outcomes in terms of better human relationships in his own life."

HIGH SCHOOL QUINTET LOSES TO BURLINGTON

Benny Pitkoe is Big Gun in Artillery of Shots Through Cords

FINAL SCORE, 31 TO 15

Hitting the cords for eleven twin pointers and converting nine charity throws the Blue and White of Burlington High defeated a weak Bristol High Five, 31-15, in an uninteresting fray played last evening on the Burlington court.

Benny Pitkoe was the big gun in the artillery of the Jersey quintet, tossing in five field goals and making a trio of fouls good. Pitkoe's sharp-shooting was instrumental in avenging the 25-24 defeat handed them when they traveled to the local court.

The homesters started off right and mounted an 18-5 advantage as the half time whistle blew. The Cardinal and Gray had another "on" second half, tallying ten points, but the Burlington aggregation swished the nets for thirteen to lead at the final gun, 31-15.

The long tosses of the home towners made certain of victory for the Blue and White. The visiting five kept working the ball up but the small floor handicapped them tremendously.

WOMEN WILL DELIGHT IN COOKING SCHOOL

"Magician" Will Turn Ingredients Into Fairy-Like Creations

MENUS UP HER SLEEVES

Regardless of what weather conditions might prove to be on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons of next week, home-makers, would-be home-makers, and those who delight in entertaining in various manners, will be assured a thrill-packed two-hour period each day at the Courier Cooking School, and a warm place in which to enjoy it.

The thrills will come from watching the varieties of ingredients magically turned into fairy-like creations. The "magician" will be Miss Vera A. Schneider, who is scheduled to instruct in a most entertaining manner the women of Bristol and all lower Bucks County. And Miss Schneider can do just that.

This young woman, versed in the art of cookery, and who can plan such delightful and well-balanced menus, has long been planning her visit with women here. Although "magicians" never have anything up their sleeve, it is safe to tell in advance that this home-making "magician" has. There are all kinds of recipes, including appetizers, fine soups for these cold days, excellent roasts and all that goes with them; vegetable dishes galore, toothsome salads; and desserts that will make all exclaim. She will instruct also in the baking of pies, cakes, various doughs; as well as in tea and coffee making.

The women attending will be wided-eyed from the stroke of two until four on each of the three days, and it is safe to say that those who are present Wednesday will be there on Thursday, with many others augmenting their number; and they'll all be there Friday too. Enthusiasm is running high now, and it will run higher when two o'clock arrives on Wednesday.

Gifts? Yes, indeed. There will be many gifts each day, including ten bags of foods and house-hold goods daily, as well as the tasty dishes which Miss Schneider will concoct.

No woman in this section should miss it.

KENNAMER CALM IN CELL

Pawnee, Oklahoma, Feb. 22—An old square stone house is Pawnee's jail. There, on the second floor, 19 year old Philip Kennamer sat in a cell today smoking a cigarette, calm, dry-eyed, brave, even as last night, when he stood and heard read a verdict which found him guilty of manslaughter in the first degree, for the killing of John Gorrell, he was cool and collected, the same Phil who admitted he pumped two bullets into the brain of the Kansas City dental college student and left him dead in his automobile. Tomorrow afternoon, at 2 o'clock, this "problem" son of Federal Judge F. E. Kennemer, must stand before the Bar of Justice to receive a sentence of four years to life in prison. Judge Thurman Hurst, who presided at the boy's trial, will pass sentence.

ATTACKS ON RELIEF PROGRAM

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22—The administration's plan for a $4,800,000,000 work relief program faced fresh attacks in the Senate today after President Roosevelt's stunning defeat on the prevailing wage issue. The leaders were amazed by the Senate's 44 to 43 vote ordering the government to pay prevailing wage rates on all relief projects even if the monthly wages are held to a $50 average. They were hopeful the House would reject the provision and that it ultimately would be left out of the bill. Rumors flooded Capitol Hill. One intimated that the President would abandon the whole works relief program and accept continuation of direct relief for another year, while another declared the Senate would strike out the whole works relief program and continue the "dole."

FOUR WOMEN'S CLUBS ARE GUESTS OF THE SOROSIS

Club Institute Conducted By Langhorne Organization Yesterday

HAVE FORUM AND MUSIC

LANGHORNE, Feb. 22—Members of women's clubs in Makefield Township, Newtown, Morrisville and Somerton, were guests yesterday at a club institute in the Langhorne Library, with Langhorne Sorosis members as hostesses.

The afternoon program, arranged by Mrs. Henry Pickering, chairman of club institutes, was presented by Mrs. Joseph Edgerton, vice chairman of institutes, in the absence of Mrs. Pickering.

Patriotic numbers were appropriately included, these being two poems, "Washington" (Turner), read by Mrs. Paul Bennett; and "George Washington", read by Mrs. Furman G. Mather.

During the course of an interesting forum questions such as "In what way may club institutes benefit a club?" and "What are the 10 departments authorized by the State Federation?" were answered. The latter was answered by the Sorosis president, Mrs. Lynn J. Harrington.

Mrs. G. Coe Farrier, president of the Somerset Club, presented the topic of "Music," stating that "Music is a language which begins where words leave off." She added that much is to be derived from music, and stated that an individual should not be reticent in stating what type of music he or she likes best, as various types appeal to different people. In closing Mrs. Farrier recited a poem "Music," and by request gave a poem entitled "I Heard a Bird at Twilight," and recounted a story.

The Sorosis choral society gave two selections, led by Mrs. Edgar Frutcher, Jr., with Miss Lillian Patterson at the piano.

The hospitality committee served tea and sandwiches.

Announcement was made of a meeting of the Art Section on February 25th, at studio of Mrs. Carl Schneider. The speaker will be Mrs. Herman Heyl, who will give an illustrated lecture on Oriental rugs. The next meeting of Sorosis, on March 7th, will be the annual business session. Current events will be in charge of Mrs. Harry Williams, Jr.

SEVENTH DEFENDANT IN THE WEISS CASE IS GIVEN A HEARING

Matthew Barrow Alias Matt Barrett Taken Before Justice Hobensack

IS HELD WITHOUT BAIL

Charged With Murder, Accessory After Fact and Aiding in Secreting a Kidnapper

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 22—The seventh defendant in William (Big Nose) Weiss murder case—Matthew Barrow alias Matt Barrett, 36, of 852 West Cobb's Park, Philadelphia, was taken before Justice of the Peace W. Carlile Hobensack yesterday afternoon for a hearing.

Barrow, one of the remaining members of the Mais-Legenza gang, was held without bail on charges of murder, accessory after the fact to murder and aiding in secreting of a kidnapped person. Francis Wiley, Martin Farrell and Robert James Eckert were indicted by the Grand Jury last week on murder charges growing out of the same kidnap-murder. Joseph James Coffey, Harry Seibel and Mrs. Beatrice Wilkinson, were indicted for accessory after the fact to murder.

In custody of Sheriff Horace E. Gwinner, County Detective Antonio Russo, Troopers Joseph Davey and Lawrence Prior, of the Doylestown sub-station of State Police, Barrow, who was arrested in Philadelphia by police of that city early this week, was brought to the Justice's office with Robert James Eckert, who has turned State's evidence and furnished the Commonwealth with most of the details that will be used in the State's case to send at least Wiley and Farrell to the electric chair.

The prisoners were heavily guarded on the way from the County Prison to the Justice's office and return. Not a single chance is being taken and the same safety-first policy will be in operation throughout the trials.

Eckert was the only witness at the Barrow hearing. He testified that it was Barrow who saw to it, after Mais and Legenza got out of jail, that they met Wiley and Farrell, who had escaped from the Eastern Penitentiary through a sewer in the most sensational get-away in the history of the "pen" last July.

Eckert further testified that it was Barrow who brought Mais and Legenza to his home at 1422 West Toronto street, Philadelphia, in October, 1934. Barrow was also present, Eckert testified, when the $8000 ransom money that was paid for Weiss, who was never returned alive, was divided at the Eckert home. Barrow's share, Eckert testified, was $600.

Eckert further testified that in his opinion, Barrow knew that Weiss was being held prisoner in the Torresdale Manor house after he had been kidnaped. There were four persons in one room and Barrow was in a parlor after Weiss had been killed, Barrow testified. The witness said that he thought Barrow was present when the actual murder took place. He said that he, Barrow and Coffey left after the killing.

Weiss was shot twice and his legs wrapped with iron attached to railroad fish-plates. He was then thrown into the Neshaminy Creek near Croydon on the night of November 6, 1934.

The first case scheduled for trial in the Weiss kidnap-murder will be that of Francis Wiley, charged with murder. Records at the Eastern Penitentiary show that he is also known as Frank R. Wiley. He will be brought to Doylestown Monday from the "pen" for trial. Judge Calvin S. Boyer will preside at the first trial.

MAY BE EXPLOSION SPARK

Tokyo, Feb. 22—The killing of another editor, Matsutaro Shoriki, famous publisher of the newspaper Yomiuri, partially because he sponsored the barn-storming trip of Babe Ruth and other major league ball players in Japan, may be the spark that will set off another explosion of reactionary terrorism. It was feared in progressive circles today. Katsunaki Magasaki, former policeman and new editor of a right winged magazine, attacked Shoriki with a dagger, as the publisher stepped from his automobile, and cut his throat. Shoriki is reported to be in a serious condition. As soon as word of the attack spread through the metropolis, police guards at the home of prominent members of the Diet, who have been assailing the ultra-conservative peacocks, and army elements, were strengthened.

WASHINGTON

It is the human qualities—mental, moral and spiritual—underlying great acts that lend to them their chief appeal. The doers of immemorial deeds have all been men of many and varied qualities. To understand their acts and their lives, properly requires a broad comprehension of their combined characteristics. But it is always found that every great figure in history was gifted with some one quality that stood out pre-eminently above all the others.

Lincoln's supreme trait was his humanity. Washington's, is generally agreed to have been his sense of duty. This quality, like the leit-motif in a Beethoven symphony, was visible in every important phase of his career. It gave strength and logic to all his other qualities. It sustained him during the most trying experiences of the War of Independence. It steadied his hand in the formation of our present system of government. It was a motive power behind many of his acts as president that strengthened the foundations of the government built on the new constitution. And, too, it gave Washington's character a certain sternness in dealing with men and problems that may easily have seemed unjustifiable in a less monumental figure. Frequently his expression of his sense of duty was keeping with Wordsworth's description of that quality in the line, "stern daughter of the voice of God."

While he has long since found his place in history as one of the world's greatest patriots and statesmen, the true Washington still suffers a certain obscurity from a host of apocryphal legends. Mason Weems, probably his most popular biographer, seems to be chiefly responsible. The cherry tree story is pretty. It points to Washington's instinctive regard for truth. But the essential dignity of his truthfulness and honesty is shown with entire sufficiency in his real deeds. Myths often tend to throw their heroes out of perspective. Legends may be glamorous and have boundless sentimental appeal, but men can be interpreted correctly only in terms of reality.

Doubtless most Americans think of Washington chiefly as the commander of the military forces of the original states. But generals in the field of action are of necessity destroyers. Washington deserves to be remembered for the great constructive abilities he exhibited after the close of the War of Independence.

Reilly, who failed to spring Hauptmann, says: "A metropolitan jury would not return such a verdict because they could reason on the facts better." Well, Reilly, if your clients confine their activities to your metropolis in the future, it will be all right to the rest of the country.

New Honey Krushed Bread Baked By Bell Bread Bakers Relieves Constipation

Many Report Marvelous Results From Switching to New Cellophane Wrapped Bell Honey Krushed Bread.

Several customers who have eaten the new Bell Honey Krushed Bread for the last week, report that constipation has been greatly relieved and in many cases eliminated.

The pleasing combination of crushed whole wheat kernels, pure honey and other ingredients, blended by a secret process gives your diet the necessary roughage thereby eliminating dosing with drugs and purges.

Bell Honey Krushed Wheat Bread regulates and nourishes the internal glands which control elimination. This process of nature clears the intestines and gives new strength and energy. Furthermore, the perfect blending of pure honey, the extra coating of crushed wheat on the outer crust, gives delicious, appetizing flavor.

Baked twice daily and rushed fresh from the ovens, your family will love this rich, wheaty, wholesome bread. And if any member has been troubled by the most common of all American ailments—constipation—quick relief can easily be obtained with Bell Honey Krushed Wheat Bread.

Make This Ten-Day Test

Hosts of morbid, tired and discouraged men and women are amazed at this new easy way to regulate the bowels. Give it a ten-day trial. After the third or fourth day you will begin to feel more peppy, your bowels will begin to move regularly and you will enjoy life once more.

Bell Honey Krushed Wheat Bread gets right down to the cause of constipation and supplies the needed relief in a natural way. First, its rich, nutty flavor makes it doubly appetizing and second, the crushed whole wheat kernels and pure honey sweetening are easily assimilated. They nourish the digestive glands. They produce the juices that alone enable you to digest the fats and starches. These normally keep you healthy, but if allowed to clog and retard the natural process of elimination, stoppage occurs, headaches and ill-health follows. Constipation is the most prevalent complaint in this country. Bell Honey Krushed Wheat Bread relieves this easily and quickly.

Be sure you get Bell Honey Krushed Wheat Bread. Look for the extra outer coating of crushed wheat on the crust. —(Advertisement.)

"More Money"

by CHARLES GRANT

SYNOPSIS
Success crowned every venture of Jasper Ingram, wealthy promoter. Millions were at his disposal much to the envy of Homer Alspaugh, his confidential secretary, who has all he can do to meet mortgage payments and the gold-digging demands of his flirtatious wife, Marian. Cathleen McCarthy, beautiful young stenographer, substitutes for Ingram's secretary while the latter is on vacation. Marian Alspaugh visits her husband's office to try and get some money.

CHAPTER III

For the second time the outer door opened to admit a woman from the world of leisure. This time the interest of the personnel was real and respectful. Laura Ingram was no such frequent visitor as Alspaugh's wife, and there was not a lowly file clerk who was ignorant of her social prestige and importance.

Though her complexion appeared faded and faintly lined, her features were regular and she had triumphantly preserved her figure. Her most youthful attribute, however, was her dark-gold hair, as abundant and as lustrous now as on the day of her wedding.

She entered her husband's office far more simply than had Marian Alspaugh. In a low voice she asked if Mr. Ingram had anyone with him and being answered in the negative, said, "I'll go right in, then."

Alspaugh hurried to open the door for her. "Let me show you in, Mrs. Ingram! And good afternoon! It isn't often we have the pleasure of seeing you here."

"Oh, it's Mr.—Alspaugh—!" Her hesitation before the name was barely perceptible. "How are you?" Marian's piquant face appeared behind her husband's shoulders. "I do hope you haven't forgotten me completely, Mrs. Ingram! I'm Mrs. Alspaugh. I was introduced to you at the polo game, when Mr. Seward played so marvellously—"

"Why, of course!" Laura Ingram's voice warmed at the mention of her son. "I remember you perfectly. It's so nice to see you again!"

She hesitated, her eyes drifting covertly up and down Marian's attractive figure. "I wonder if you'd care to—Have you an engagement for tomorrow afternoon?"

"Oh, no!"
"We're giving a sort of garden party for charity," Laura Ingram explained carefully—as if Marian didn't know all about it, hadn't known for weeks and longed, without hope, to receive an invitation.

"We're having all sorts of features, outdoor theatricals, fortune telling, treasure hunting and, you know, it occurred to me you might care to come and sell cigarettes."

"Oh, Mrs. Ingram, I should love it!" Marian gasped. "What must I wear?"

"Any little fantastic costume you may have—or just a pretty summer frock. You'll have a tray, of course, with ribbons over your shoulders—and mind you make your customers pay well for their cigarettes!"

She went on into the private office, with a gracious nod of farewell.

"I've just asked that little Mrs. Alspaugh to sell cigarettes for us tomorrow. She's exactly the type to wheedle men. I shouldn't be surprised if she takes in more money than Rose and Mabel together. You're looking very abstracted, Jasper! Had you forgotten that I told you I should call for you at four, that you positively promised to put in an appearance with me at Ruth Bartlett's, to meet that Spanish Infanta of hers?"

"Did I say I'd do that?" Ingram got to his feet reluctantly, blinking away thoughts of business. "If I did, I suppose I'll have to make good. But I feel right now as if I could worry along contentedly for the rest of my life, even if I never made the acquaintances of a Spanish Infanta!"

disliked boats and insisted upon using her car. Now he grumbled at the slowness of their progress up-town and over the Queensborough bridge.

She did not reply, being occupied with a final review of her plans for the entertainment. Taking her social activities seriously, Laura Ingram was a successful hostess. To advance her position in society was to her a career and an art. Her husband had helped her by becoming so rich that—this being America—he had made her inevitably socially important. When he married her, she was a well-bred, middle class girl, living with her father, who had a professorship in a small college.

To the professor's discontented daughter, Jasper Ingram represented opportunity; to Ingram she husband gave her little of his confidence or his company, he gave her all the forms of respect, unlimited money and reasonable compliance with her schemes that required his assistance. Social ambition, supplying her with an occupation, gave her something to think about and work for.

While Ingram mused silently of mergers and stock manipulations, she thought now about the Infanta, second cousin to ex-King Alfonso, whom a rival hostess, widow of a former Ambassador to Spain, was entertaining. Laura had tried to secure this lady for tomorrow, but Ruth Bartlett was whirling her prize to Bar Harbor. After all, however, she reflected, the princess was only a pious, middle-aged woman with a moustache, heavy socially and physically; let Ruth keep was the coolly selected instrument of a purpose he had at heart.

"I shall be most happy to come," d'Alhues assured Mrs. Ingram, and gazed soulfully into her eyes.

When he decided to marry, he proposed to Laura Seward for what seemed to him a number of good reasons. She was handsome and apparently healthy, she had a scholarly background, and he had read somewhere that a child derives its intellectual equipment mainly from its mother. Great men, he had heard, have, as a rule, remarkable mothers and mediocre sons.

Marriage opened his eyes to the fact that Laura's health was not altogether sound, and that the pliability and sweetness and disposition she had shown during courtship masked a disposition that was not entirely angelic. He had naively tested her for love of children and joyfully given her high marks on her responses, but, with the birth of Seward, she refused to have another child.

Seward thus was an only child, but, surprisingly enough, he was a charming boy, popular at prep school and college and now shamelessly run after by half the girls on Long Island.

Ingram, somehow, had never been able to get close to his son. As Seward grew older and heard certain rumors about his father and other women, the gulf between the two widened—and the boy became a violent partisan of his mother. So it was he entered a period of cynicism and disillusionment in which she alone retained his reverence.

Laura Ingram's life was eminently satisfactory to her. If her her, although, of course, it sounded awfully well to have an Infanta staying with you.

It developed, when the Ingrams had joined the party on the Bartlett terrace, that only a few of the more intimate members of Dona Josepha's entourage were going with her to Maine. The Marques d'Alhues y Silva, certainly the most attractive member of her party, was to remain at loose ends in New York.

"But then, I am enchanted with your New York," he told Mrs. Ingram, "your so beautiful women and so many cars, your skyscrapers such as we have not in Spain. What is Bar Harbor but another San Sebastian?—and that is an old story."

"You don't find it frightfully hot in town?" asked Mrs. Ingram.

"Heat does not incommode me, Senora—on the contrary. After the revolution we went first to England. B-r-r. I still carry the chill of that England in my bones!"

He had a charming laugh that broke the classic lines of his face into boyish curves and showed teeth, startlingly white in contrast to his general swarthiness.

"Won't you come to us tomorrow, Marques?" Laura begged. "We will promise not to freeze you, and you might be amused."

"I shall be most happy," he assured, and gazed soulfully into her eyes as he kissed her hand in parting.

JUNGLE GIANTS ARE STOPPED BY ST. ANN'S

St. Ann's A. A. added another victory to its list last night when the Purple and Gold quintet stopped the Zulu Jungle Giants, 47-39, in a rough match on the Italian Mutual Aid floor.

A rally in the final session gave the localites the victory. The Zulu team had forged ahead early in this period but a rally by the Saints was strong enough to chalk up the triumph. Two sensational field goals by Bud Tullio led the way to victory for the Spadacino-managed team.

TREVOSE QUINTET WINS OVER MCGINLEY'S A. A.

Bud McGinley's Bristol A. A. team made a poor showing against the Trevoze A. A. team in the first game of the night, played on Mutual Aid court. The Trevoze club finished on the long end of a 27-17 count.

The score does not indicate the one-sided affair as for three quarters the Trevoze club did nothing but pile in point after point against the Bristol team. However, it was a different story in the last ten minutes as the green-jerseyed players began to sink in double-deckers.

Early in the first quarter, "Johnny" Dougherty hit the cords for a twin-pointer. This represented the only Bristol double-decker until the last five minutes of the game when McGinley's men started to pour them in from all directions. Six field goals were counted by the A. A. team in that last quarter spurt.

The Trevoze club had amassed a 21-5 lead before the rally and were on the verge of swamping the Bristolans before they came to life. At half time Trevoze was leading, 16-4.

High scorers in the game were Myer, of Trevoze, and Dougherty, of Bristol, with nine counters each.

The slippery floor had much to do with the mis-handling of the ball throughout both contests.

High School Quintet Loses To Burlington

"Blake" O'Farrow, "Love and Kisses" Arenz, and Pitkow were the men who tallied from the mid-floor stripe. Phil Carnvale, Sammie Sirott, and Harry Berry were all high for the Bunnies, each tallying a quartet of points. Spencer with one field goal came next and Hughes made the additional gift shot to give the visitors their fifteen marks.

The Jayvee record of four straight was smashed in the preliminary as Burlington J. V. was victorious, 19-13. On Tuesday evening, Bristol High is seen in its final game of the 1935 campaign. Langhorne High will offer the opposition in a Lower Bucks County League fray.
